

Verbal and emotional abuse is just as damaging as physical abuse.

Identifying the signs of escalation

-Potential for Escalation-

- □ Mildly increased agitation
 - o visibly upset (crying, impatient tapping, fidgeting).
 - may exhibit a change in voice tone (either to the extreme of a whisper/mumbling or a raised voice tone).
- □ Withdrawal from activities and/or other people
 - may seek isolation by sitting by themselves.
- Decreased focus
 - o May appear as if they are not paying attention to their surroundings.
 - Decreased attention or involvement in the current activity.
- □ Decrease in positive humor/Increase in the use of sarcasm
- □ Restricted body language
 - May appear to be closed off (looking down, failing to give eye contact to those speaking, crossing their arms, etc.).
- Expressions of hopelessness
 - May include expression of suicidal ideation.
- Engaging in more self-oriented behaviors (dominating, withdrawal, constantly seeking recognition, constantly

-Verbal Expression-

Expressions of hostility -These are not threatening statements, but do indicate the person is upset.

Arguing -Argues without clear focus, over trivial things, or over others views/opinions.

Interrupting -May interrupt in a defensive manner. Not listening to rationales he/she sought out.

Ignoring -Not following instructions, blatantly disregards feedback. Not answering questions, no response to questions Avoids accepting responsibility -Difficulty accepting consequences and feedback.

Denying -Unwilling to recognize their behavior is causing problems. Unwilling to accept responsibility, blaming others, making excuses, minimizing, etc.

*PEOPLE WHO ARE VIOLENT TO ANIMALS
RARELY STOP THERE

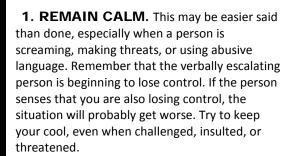

-Assault/Aggression-

- o Punching or hitting a wall, kicking, biting, or spitting at another person
- Throwing items with no clear intent to hit or hurt anyone -throwing directly at someone
 - Slamming fists, stomping feet, or slamming doors
 - Yelling or screaming loudly

Dealing with individuals who are belligerent, hostile, or noncompliant can be an everyday occurrence for some people.

Your effective response to this defensive behavior is often the key to avoiding a physical confrontation with an out-of-control individual.

These tips for verbal intervention and deescalation will help you intervene in the safest, most effective way possible.

As a person becomes increasingly agitated, they will pay less attention to your words and more attention to your body language, 65% of it. Be aware of your use of space, posture, and gestures. Don't get too close to the person, and avoid gestures that might seem threatening. Make sure your nonverbal behavior is consistent with your verbal message.

Effective de-escalation techniques feel abnormal. We are driven into "fight or flight" mode when scared. However, in de-escalation, we can do neither. We must appear centered and calm even when we are terrified. These techniques must be practiced before they are needed so that they can become "second nature".

When under stress, people tend to hold their breath or breathe shallowly. Practice slow, deep diaphragmatic breathing when confronted by stressful situations to decrease your own level of arousal. Also use positive affirmations or self-talk. It is a fact that our thoughts trigger emotions and are triggered by our communication with ourselves. Stay positive when under attack by maintaining a win-win attitude.

DON'T GIVE UP

While there is no guarantee that a person will not physically act out, following these tips will help you reduce the anxiety and defensiveness that often precede dangerous behavior.

- Reasoning with an enraged person is not possible.
- The first and only objective in de-escalation is to reduce the level of arousal so that discussion becomes possible
- 3. KEÉP IT SIMPLE. Be clear and direct in your message. Avoid jargon and complicated choices. A person who is beginning to lose rational control will not be processing information as well as they usually do. Complex messages will increase their anxiety and probably make their behavior more difficult to manage.
- 4. USE REFLECTIONS. Put the person's statements in your own words and then check with them to see if you have understood what they meant. By repeating or reflecting the person's message, you'll give them an opportunity to clarify that message. This reflective listening is also a powerful way to let the person know that you care enough to listen carefully to their words.
- 5. USE SILENCE. Surprisingly, silence is a very effective technique. Silence on your part allows the individual time to clarify their thoughts and restate their message. This often leads to valuable insight and clearer understanding of the true source of the person's conflict.

6. WATCH YOUR PARAVERBALS.

Paraverbal communication refers to the tone, volume, speed and rhythm of your speech. Many identical statements can have completely opposite meanings, depending on your paraverbals. For example, the question, "What's wrong?" could be stated in a caring, supportive way or in an impatient, condescending way. Avoid double messages by making sure that your paraverbal communication is consistent with the words you use.
