ADJOURNMENT: Next Meeting February 21, 2024 (Wednesday)

If special accommodations or arrangements are needed to attend this County meeting, please contact the Administration Office at 630-553-4171, a minimum of 24-hours prior to the meeting time.

It started this way: During the night of April 19, 1933, someone broke into the Illinois National Guard Armory in the tiny unincorporated Kendall County community of Plattville. Local, state, and national law enforcement and military officials were alarmed because taken was a virtual armory of four Browning Automatic Rifles (nicknamed with its initials, the BAR), along with 11 Colt M1911 .45 cal. automatic pistols and several hundred rounds of ammunition.

The semi-automatic pistols, the standard .45 cal. U.S. Army sidearm, featured a 9-round box magazine, were heavy, rugged, and extremely dependable. The BARs were powerful, fully automatic weapons that served the U.S. Army as well as the National Guard as their standard squad automatic weapon. Each eight-man squad was generally equipped with one BAR to augment the firepower of the rest of the squad’s Springfield M1903 bolt-action rifles that were standard equipment during those pre-World War II days. Both the BAR and the Springfield rifles were chambered for the powerful .30-06 cartridge.

Plattville was the smallest community in the nation to boast its own National Guard Armory, the base for Company E of the 129th Illinois Infantry Regiment. The armory had been the brainchild of Kendall County resident Charles G. “Timmy” Howell, who commanded it, holding the rank of captain.

The armory was built with community donations and labor and through the pay it provided, Company E provided badly needed cash for more than 100 young men, mostly farm boys, during the dark years of the Great Depression. It also provided valuable training for those young men, most of whom would go on to fight their way through the island hopping campaigns in the Pacific during World War II.

But given its location in a sleepy farming community, the security provided for Company E's arms and ammunition was simply not up to the task of fending off the new breed of mobile criminals that had lately blossomed.

As soon as the theft was reported law enforcement and military officials alike, began worrying about who, exactly, had taken the guns and why.

Word got around via the neighborhood telegraph while officials did their best to downplay the theft. They did such a good job minimizing it, in fact, that 60 years later, no one had an inkling such a thing had ever happened. As an example, in an oddly naive, but apparently serious, comment, the editor of the Kendall County Record remarked in the paper's May 3 edition: "Hope the person who stole the four [BARs] from the armory is honest; we'd hate to face these guns in the hands of a crook."

We can only hope he was prepared to be disappointed, because after a spectacular July 20 shootout between the notorious Barrow Gang—the Bonnie and Clyde and associates made so famous in subsequent movies—and law enforcement officers just outside Kansas City, Mo., some of the BARs and pistols were recovered from the motel rooms the gang had occupied.

The Barrow Gang, made famous to a new generation in Arthur Penn's 1967 film, "Bonnie and Clyde," was one of the most violent of the criminal groups afflicting the Midwest during the lawless 1920s and 1930s.

Clyde Barrow was the leader of the gang, with his girlfriend Bonnie Parker (Parker was married to another man who was in jail at the time). Besides Bonnie and Clyde, Clyde's brother, Melvin "Buck" Parker, and Buck's wife, Blanche, along with C.W. Jones comprised the most consistent members of the gang. They were occasionally joined by Henry Methvin, Raymond Hamilton, Joe Palmer, and Ralph Fults.

Although the gang garnered a lot of attention thanks to Bonnie and Clyde's knack for publicizing themselves, they were mostly notable for the short period of time during which they were active, a period that only ran from 1932 to 1934, not to mention their extreme violence.

Early on, the gang primarily engaged in small business hold-ups, but then decided to add bank robbery to their repertoire. The Barrow Gang was notorious among law enforcement for its ferocious counter-attacks whenever confronted by authorities. The BAR was Clyde Barrow's weapon of choice, something that easily out-gunned the revolvers and shotguns of most lawmen of the era. Although limited to 20-round detachable magazines, the BAR on full automatic could fire more than 500 rounds a minute. John Browning invented the weapon for U.S. troops during World War I, where it proved extremely effective, with its relatively light weight, mobility, high rate of fire, and long range—the BAR was accurate up to 1,500 yards and had a maximum range of nearly three miles. It could also be loaded with armor-piercing rounds, something else Barrow favored.

The automatic weapon with which most law enforcement agencies of the era were armed was the Thompson Submachine Gun—the famed Tommy Gun. The Thompson, however, while having a faster rate of fire than the BAR, fired the same cartridge as the .45 cal. pistol, and had an effective range of only 170 yards or so.

On April 13, 1933, when police officers raided the apartment in Joplin, Mo., where Bonnie, Clyde, Buck, Blanche, and W.D. Jones were hiding out after a four-month crime spree, they thought they were raiding a bootlegging operation, which is what suspicious neighbors had reported. But when they confronted the gang, the police were caught by surprise as the Barrow gang opened up with a vicious barrage of automatic weapons fire, killing Constable John Harryman and police officer Harry McGinnis. Although the gang escaped, they were forced by the gunfight to leave most of their belongings and weapons behind.

Gangster Clyde Barrow favored the BAR for its rate of fire and power.

Six days later, the Platteville National Guard Armory was raided and the four BARs, 11 Colt .45 automatic pistols and hundreds of rounds of ammunition were stolen. A week or so later, the gang hit a bank in Indiana.

During the next two and a half months, the Barrow Gang continued its wide-ranging campaign of lawlessness in Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa, Texas, Arkansas, and Missouri as they sped from crime scene to crime scene using the Ford V-8 autos Clyde favored.

In 1934, in fact, Clyde (who had worked as a mechanic before taking up outlawry) wrote to Henry Ford congratulating him on his Ford autos and their V-8 engines: “While I still have got breath in my lungs I will tell you what a dandy car you make. I have drove Fords exclusively when I could get away with one. For sustained speed and freedom from trouble the Ford has got every other car skinned and even if my business hasn’t been strictly legal it don’t hurt anything to tell you what a fine car you got in the V-8.”

On July 20, 1933, the gang decided to find someplace to lay low, choosing the Red Crown Tourist Court in Platte County, Mo., just outside Kansas City. But their suspicious behavior caused people in the neighborhood to call the authorities.

Colt Arms' .45 cal. semi-automatic pistol was the standard U.S. Army sidearm for most of the 20th Century. It was favored by gangsters because it was rugged, dependable, and fired a heavy round of ammunition.

This time the police showed up in force armed with submachine guns, a car that had been armored, plus a mobile plate steel bulletproof shield. The armored sedan pulled up to block the garage door behind which the gang's car was parked, and Sheriff Holt Coffee rapped on the door of one of the two tourist cabins the gang occupied, demanding they come out. No dummy, he immediately ducked behind the steel shield.

Clyde, Buck, and Jones instantly replied with a withering fusillade of BAR fire, literally driving Coffee's heavy steel shield backwards, although it proved proof against Clyde's armor-piercing ammunition. The gang also shot up the armored car, this time their armor-piercing .30-06 rounds perforating the car's light armor, and wounding the driver who backed up to get out of the line of fire, allowing the gang to escape. But both Buck and Blanche Barrow were seriously wounded. Amazingly, none of the dozens of spectators who had gathered to watch, nor any of the police officers were badly injured in the furious gun battle.

It took a while for the Feds to identify and trace all the weapons and other materials they found in the gang's motel rooms, but on Oct. 19, 1933, FBI Agent J.J. Keating of the bureau's Chicago office wrote to his superiors: "Will consult commander of Company E, 129th Infantry, Illinois National Guard, with respect to the loss of the Colt 45 pistols, and Browning automatic rifles mentioned in report of Special Agent Dwight Brantley, 9/1/33, Washington, D.C., and inform him that said firearms were taken from the Barrow gang and are in possession of the Kansas City office of this division."

Presumably, the weapons were later returned to Company E and, hopefully, better secured from being pilfered by passing bandits. And there the matter largely rested until 2003 when Winston Ramsey, editor-in-chief of a World War II history magazine based in England, traveled to the U.S. while researching his book, On the Trail of Bonnie and Clyde Then and Now chronicling the days of Bonnie and Clyde, visiting places the notorious couple frequented during their crime spree.

Ramsey contacted reporter Tony Scott at the Kendall County Record concerning reports he had obtained that the Plattville Armory had been robbed of weapons and ammunition by Bonnie and Clyde, something that no one in the community recalled—or at least would admit to recalling. But then in 2011, Agent Keating's letter became public, and Tony revisited the story in a couple articles. And by then I'd been working on transcribing the Record's "Oswego" news columns, along with other news items that sounded interesting. One of those was the Record's editor writing about the theft of weapons from the Plattville Armory in the paper's April 26 edition and a follow-up the next week, May 3, 1933.

Granted, there's no physical evidence the Barrow Gang were responsible for stealing the weapons from the Plattville Armory. And the question of how the gang would have known about the Plattville Armory still raises a few doubts.

But in the book Blanche Barrow wrote about her harrowing adventures with the gang, she said that Clyde and W.D. Jones robbed the Plattville Armory. At least three other books on the gang repeat the same story. And it is a fact that the FBI recovered many of the stolen weapons after the Red Crown shoot-out in Missouri, so the gang certainly had them in their possession.

The bullet-riddled Ford V-8 auto Clyde was driving when law enforcement officers ambushed Bonnie and Clyde in rural Louisiana is on exhibit in the casino at Whiskey Pete's in Primm, Nevada.

Would the theft have made sense in terms of opportunity? The gang was in the Joplin, Mo. shootout on April 13, where they lost a lot of their arms and ammunition. They then attempted a bank robbery at the Lucerne State Bank in Lucerne Indiana on May 12. The Plattville robbery took place the night of April 19-20, and Plattville is sort of right in between Joplin and that Indiana bank. Given Clyde's love of long-distance high-speed driving taking random zigzag routes, it's certainly possible—maybe even probable—Clyde and W.D. Jones really were the ones who stole all those weapons in the middle of his gang's crime spree. Which leaves the question of how the gang knew about the Plattville Armory in the tiny rural community unanswered.

In any case, Bonnie and Clyde's criminal spree came to a violent end a year later. On May 23, 1934, lawmen, taking no chances with the pair's habit of replying with overwhelming firepower, set up an ambush in rural Bienville Parish, Louisiana, and riddled Clyde's car with more than 130 rounds of shotgun, rifle, and pistol fire, killing both of the outlaws. Federal authorities said the pair and their gang was responsible for at least 13 murders and robberies and burglaries too numerous to count.

In retrospect, local officials did a pretty good job consigning the Barrow Gang's Plattville Armory robbery to the memory hole. But like most history, it eventually floated to the surface once again, assuring at least a footnote in the story of one of the most violent crime sprees the Midwest has ever seen.

History Mystery: Did Bonnie or Clyde Rob the Plattville Armory?

The Illinois National Guard armory no longer exists, but federal records show authorities found weapons reported stolen from the Plattville armory in a cabin after a shootout involving the infamous pair.

Part of the mystery behind whether Clyde Barrow of Bonnie and Clyde infamy robbed an armory in the small Kendall County village of Plattville may come down to typos and misspellings.

As reporter Tony Scott wrote in the the Countywide section of the Dec. 1 Kendall County Record, multiple books claim Barrow and his associate W.D.

Jones stole guns from the Plattville armory on Aug. 20, 1933. The purported robbery happened nine months before authorities ambushed and killed Barrow, 25, and his companion Bonnie Parker, 23, on May 23, 1934, according to a Wikipedia article.

Skimming through United States Bureau of Investigation (as the FBI was then known) records in the online reading room, one finds a hodgepodge of dates and references to Plattsville and Flattsville.

The underlying story, though, is that authorities found two weapons reported stolen from an Illinois National Guard Armory in Plattville when they searched a cabin in Missouri after a shootout involving Barrow, Parker and three other fugitives.

Authorities searched the tourist camp near (ironically enough) Platte City, MO., on July 20, 1933, according to the Aug. 17, 1933, report of D.W. Brantley. The confusion over the date of the armory robbery may be linked to this report listing a date of Aug. 20, 1933, (rather than July 20) in a few places in what appears to be an error.

The gunfight happened the night before, on July 19, 1933, inflicting an ultimately fatal wound on Barrow's brother Marvin/Buck. The gang fled.

When authorities searched the cabin, they found five Colt .45-caliber automatic pistols and a Browning automatic rifle, as well as 47 empty shells, according to the Aug. 17, 1933 report. Some of the weapons' numbers matched those reported stolen from an armory in Enid, OK, on July 7, 1933, and from the "Company E, 129th Infantry, Illinois National Guard" on April 19, 1933, at "Flattsville, Illinois."

Apparently, this caused some confusion, as the report continues: "A search of the Postal Guide fails to show any Plattsville, Illinois."

The confusion was short-lived, though. According to an Oct. 7, 1933, report by G.B. Norris, authorities at the Illinois National Guard Headquarters in Springfield indicated that five pistols and three automatic rifles were stolen from the Plattville armory on April 19, 1933, with two of the weapons' numbers matching those recovered at the Missouri campsite. The matter of spelling and geography was clarified: "They state that their records show that Company E of the 129th Infantry is located at Plattville, Illinois, and that mail received at Plattville goes through the Yorkville, Illinois, Post office."

Officials at headquarters suggested talking with Captain Charles G. Howell, who was the armory's commanding officer, about the theft.

As I clicked through the online FBI records for Barrow and Parker, I did not find any explanation of the theft or a report of an interview with Howell. However, I did find a tersely worded letter to the investigations division director at the U.S. Department of Justice. Bureau of Investigations Special Agent in Charge F. J. Blake stated in part:

"I am bringing this to the attention of the Division with the thought that it may desire to make some representations to the War Department whereby armories may be more securely protected from depredation, particularly those containing Browning automatic rifles.

"The number of rifles and automatic pistols found in possession of the Barrows, as well as the quantity of ammunition so found, indicates that the Government is furnishing ammunition and equipment to these outlaws."

It is not clear from these records whether Barrow and Jones stole the weapons from the armory themselves or acquired them some other way after they were stolen. The group, as portrayed in Bryan Burrough's Public Enemies: American's Greatest Crime Wave and the Birth of the FBI, led a nomadic life mostly robbing gas stations or drug stores. Burrough wrote:

"Unlike Dillinger and Pretty Boy Floyd, Clyde and Bonnie made no effort to establish a permanent base until the last weeks of their lives; for months the closest they came to a home was an abandoned barn outside the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie. As their notoriety grew, they would resort to living out of their car, which was littered with guns, license plates and food wrappers. They gave up bathing and normal hygiene. Their clothes were dirty. They smelled."

Who knows how long the guns stolen from Plattville's armory littered the bottom of the gang's car before being discarded in the shootout that injured two police officers and a bystander?

About the Plattville armory: The Illinois National Guard armory was established on July 16, 1923, and burned down in January 1946, according to Scott's Countywide article. Charles G. Howell, of Plattville, was captain of the Company E, 129th Infantry, from 1925 to 1941, and died in June 1969, at age 83, according to Scott's article. The Veterans Community Hall at 6617 Plattville Road was built on the former armory site.

Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow terrorized the Midwest throughout the early 1930s, robbing and killing until they were ambushed and killed by authorities in Bienville Parish, La., on May 23, 1934.

According to a profile of the killers by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), “at the time they were killed in 1934, they were believed to have committed 13 murders and several robberies and burglaries.”

This was from the 2011 article. Dec 1st of the Kendall County Record.

I've never heard this," said Fletcher, who lives on his family farm in Lisbon, said when asked about the Bonnie and Clyde legend.

The armory in Plattville was the site of the Company E 129th Infantry of the Illinois National Guard. The captain of that company from 1925 to 1941 was Charles G. Howell of Plattville, who died at the age of 83 in June of 1969, according to his obituary in the Record.

Fletcher said Howell was able to get the armory located in the small town of Plattville because he knew people in Washington, D.C.

The site of the armory has a plaque, placed as part of the county's American bicentennial celebration in July of 1976, that states that Plattville was the smallest village in the U.S. to be awarded a National Guard armory. The armory was established on July 16, 1923, according to the plaque.

"He's the one who got it started," Fletcher said of Howell. "He knew everybody in Washington; he got this National Guard company going. It was the only (armory) in the country that did not have a set of railroad tracks next to it. The mailing address was Yorkville so the big kahunas back in Washington thought it was in Yorkville."

Fletcher said he had an idea of one person who might know more about the alleged Bonnie and Clyde robbery, a friend of his brother Jack. Perhaps the grandson of Charles Howell will know more, he said.

Jay Howell sent a note alluding that his father, Clyde Howell, had told him about the robbery.

“As it was told to me, the guns were sawed off at both ends to use at their convenience,” Howell’s note read. “I’m not sure of the year, month or day of the robbery by ‘Bonnie and Clyde.’”

Plattville resident: ‘I don’t know a thing about it’

However, talking to others who grew up in Plattville or have lived in the town much of their lives, no one seems to recall being told of the Bonnie and Clyde – or Clyde and Jones – robbery.

Betty Langeland’s husband is originally from Plattville and she has been researching whether Bonnie and Clyde visited Plattville, but her search has come up empty.

Discussion of 2024 Historic Preservation Awards

Commissioners reviewed the press release and application for the awards.

The awards application window opens on January 12, 2024. Commissioners will discuss a list of potential nominees at the next meeting. Mr. Asselmeier stated that the following previously received awards: Chapel on the Green, LaSalle Manor, Howard Manthei, Historic Yorkville Jail and Sherriff's Residence, Beverly Casey, Lowell Mathre, and Stephenie Todd. Mr. Asselmeier stated the next meeting for Historic Preservation is on January 17, 2024. The window to accept nominations closes on February 28, 2024.

Commissioners discussed projects that were previously nominated, but did not receive awards, including Lyon Farm. It was noted that several nominees, such as the Ferndell Museum and the Misner Blacksmith Shop were still incomplete at the time of application submittal. Mr. Asselmeier will compile a list of nominees that did not receive awards in previous years. Chairman Wehrli asked if the historic commission can have Roger Matile come to one of our meetings as a guest. Mr. Asselmeier mentioned he would look into inviting Mr. Matile.

Discussion of 2024 Meeting with Historic Preservation Groups

Commissioners reviewed the list of invitees, save the date card, and letter to invitees.

Mr. Asselmeier stated that the “Save the Date Card” will include sentences regarding the nominees for the historic preservation awards and identifying the oldest structures and businesses in Kendall County. The “Save the Date Card” will be sent in January 2024.

Discussion of Historic Structure Surveys

Mr. Asselmeier stated the County Board approved Forty-Four Thousand Dollars ($44,000) to survey unincorporated Na-Au-Say and Seward Townships. The grant window is expected to open in February 2024. The County Board is still waiting for a reimbursement check for the previous structure survey.

Discussion of Having Commission Meetings at Historic Locations in the County

Mr. Asselmeier reported that the below list are some of the locations the Commission could have tentative meetings:

United Plattville UPA hall is available for the January 17, 2024. They are still trying to find someone to speak on the history of the arsenal.

Plano Masonic Lodge is tentative for the March 2024 meeting.

Henneberry Barn and Ashley Farm have no insulation and meetings could be held in the spring or summer of 2024.

Pickerill Pigot House will be reserved after the Summer 2024 meeting.

CORRESPONDENCE

November 20, 2023, November 22, 2023, November 27, 2023, and November 30, 2023, Emails from Edith Farnsworth House

Commissioners reviewed the emails from Farnsworth House. There were four (4) emails sent in November. On December 18, 2023, another email was sent for the 2023 Annual Appeal.

Member Heiman asked if other counties have invited Kendall County Historic Preservation to their meetings. Mr. Asselmeier responded that geographically our neighboring counties are much larger than Kendall County and do not necessarily have the same types of meetings.

November 28, 2023, Federal Highway Administration and Illinois Department of Transportation Section 106 PA Development Notification Letter

Discussion occurred regarding notification of historic places. Chairman Wehrli asked about Lyon Farm receiving a Section 106 notification letter. Mr. Asselmeier stated that the Planning, Building and Zoning Department receives the Section 106 notification letters, but the Lyon Farm letter might have been sent before he started with Kendall County in January 2017.

Chairman Wehrli spoke about several old homes being torn down on Wolf’s Crossing and how this type of demolition can be prevented.

Chairman Wehrli discussed the possibility of inviting Native American Tribes to a future Commission meeting. Member Bernacki mentioned having a Native American Tribe do a presentation on historic traditions at one (1) of the meetings. Member Flowers asked to possibly contact Aurora University to see if they have a contact. Mr. Asselmeier will check with Larry Nelson and Fran Klaas to see if they have contacts with some of the Native American Tribes historically associated with the area.

Matt,

Several federally recognized Tribes claim Kendall County as counties of interest (these include but are not limited to ancestral lands). These currently include the Peoria, Miami, one of the Winnebago tribes, four Potawatomi tribes, and the Sac and Fox. Also, Tribes occasionally add and remove counties of interest.

Farnsworth & Friendships - Building & Growing Together

Thanks for being a friend!

During this season of giving, we so appreciate your support of the Edith Farnsworth House Historic Site. Your gift helps us preserve, protect, program, and interpret this National Historic Landmark for visitors of all ages.

College architecture and design students from around the world come to study and discuss the house – a milestone of modernism. Active seniors and Midcentury Modern design enthusiasts come to check it out – and check it off their bucket list. Young adults come to photograph the minimalist glass pavilion in the woods they've seen in so many design books and magazines – and maybe take an aspirational “selfie” or two!

Whatever your connection to Farnsworth, we want to continue to be your destination for memorable experiences in 2024 and into the future. With every dollar donated by December 31, the National Trust for Historic Preservation receives a matching gift – so your generosity will have double the impact! AND from now through January 15, all donors of $100 and up will receive a BOGO (buy one, get one free) single-use discount code* so you can bring YOUR friend!

With all best wishes for the holidays,

Scott Mehaffey
Executive Director

single-use code will be emailed to you after January 15, good for any regular-priced Guided Tour through Sunday, December 1, 2024. Limited to published tour times and subject to availability and possible rescheduling due to severe weather conditions.*

YOU'RE INVITED

Preservation Approaches for Cultural Landscapes

The National Park Service defines a cultural landscape as “a geographic area, including both cultural and natural resources and the wildlife or domestic animals therein, associated with a historic event, activity, or person, or exhibiting other cultural or aesthetic values.” Cultural landscapes range from abandoned coal mines to remote coastal fishing villages, historic farmsteads, urban neighborhoods, battlefields, national cemeteries, and Cold War-era missile sites, among others. Each historic site presents unique challenges in terms of assessment and stewardship. Cultural landscape studies provide a basis for the preservation and rehabilitation of the landscape and its features.

In this complimentary, one-hour webinar, WJE conservator and historian Deborah Slaton, with historical landscape architects Liz Sargent and Jane Jacobs, will provide an overview of cultural landscapes and the approaches used to evaluate, document, and develop treatment recommendations for these significant historic places.

By the end of the webinar, you will be able to:

- Describe the types of natural and cultural resources that may be encountered in cultural landscapes
- Identify examples of cultural landscapes to illustrate the wide variety of sites for which studies may be prepared
- Differentiate between cultural landscape reports and cultural landscape inventories
- Explain some of the challenges encountered in the preservation of cultural landscapes today

There will be plenty of time for your questions during the presentation. Attendees are eligible for one American Institute of Architects (AIA) HSW Learning Unit.
